It is easy for us to daydream. Baseball, fishing, swimming, and many other outdoor recreations which are typical of spring could easily take our

Fields of interest will broaden; new faces and places will become a part of each individual life; yet there will always be a memory where the mark of TJC has stamped a permanent record.

Do You Speak?

Is it because Tyler Junior College students are just plain snooty or are they really tongue-tied?

If you will walk down the hall and speak to six different people, only about two of them will speak, and the chances are that none of them will crack

It's a proved fact that it takes more muscles to frown than to smile, but sometimes around the TJC reservation it looks as if this is the "workingest" bunch of Indians in the country. Maybe that's the trouble. Somewhere down the line people found that Indians were practically unemotional. But being unemotional does not mean not speaking.

It would add a lot of pretty scenery around the campus if TJC students would add a smile to their greeting mumble as they pass on the campus or in the halls.

Wouldn't it be great to be able to have this said about our college:

"Erwoyce by the specks and most of the girls."

"Everyone here speaks, and most of the girls put on a big smile. You know, sometimes when you don't have anything to do, it is just downright encouraging to walk across the campus and absorb those smiles."

Let's go for a stroll on the TJC campus. What TJC is well represented in the City Church League of baseball. Among some of the participating students are Jimmy Hayes, Joe Krysa, Johnny Linney, Billy Andrews, John Carter, Joe Moore, Jerry Coker, John Saleh, Robert Davidson, Donny Waller, Jeffrey Kamel, and Ralph Murad.

Loyce Brown was entered as TJC's singles in the woman's tennis division at the recent meet with Henderson County Junior College.

Jeffrey Kamel is back in school after a vacation which resulted from the mumps.

Apache Belles entertained and helped register the hundreds of people who took part in Tyler's Back-Scratch Day.

A crowd of blue jean clad TJCers recently journeyed to Tyler State Park on an all-school hayride. Pienic lunches, dancing, music, and fun for all awaited the gang at the park awaited the gang at the park.

A copy of the 1931 Pow Wow carries a picture of that year's winner of the Rotary's young citizenship award, Edward M. Potter, who is now dean of the school.

Voters, 250 strong, cast their ballots for Student Council officers. A large sheet of paper on which each voter placed his name was sent as a get-well message to Dean Potter, who is still in the hospital.

Colored films on the Rose Bowl game featuring the Apache-Pasadena football game, the half-time activities, and the pre-game parade were shown at the Tyler Theater. Black and Gold were colorfully seen as the team played and the Apache Belles Mrs. Georgia Jones, TJC instructor, participated recently in a panel discussion on the civil status of women under the laws of Texas. Four lawyers who were formerly TJC students, Jack Flock, Willis Jarrel, Ben Johnson, and Robert Boulter also took part on the program.

Ann Rowden, Janet Harvey, Ann Collins, Gwenda Mullins, Shirley McBride, Rachel Janeway, and Betty Kirkpatrick were among the girls seen modeling for Belk's Department Store's Monday night

Since the approach of spring, many students have anxiously awaited the opening of the swimming pools. Many TJCers are seen on the week ends enjoying the full comforts of a long swim.

Job Guides Received

By HUNTER SCHMIDT

Approximately 200 Career Research Monographs were received recently by the TJC library containing information on almost any occupation a college student can study

The pamphlet dealing with a career in business administration is an excellent example with which to illustrate how the pamphlets take a person from "soup to nuts" in his chosen occupation.

Running a business requires two different types of executives: the administrator or policy maker, and the manager type who is responsible for putting the policies into practice.

In the highly developed state in which business exists today it is becoming more and more necessary that both types secure special training for their careers. Just as a person interested in law or medicine would study the pro-fession of his choice in college so the business executive and spend some time in college.

A recent editorial in Time states that the special training for their careers. Just as a Do the words "double the average salary anything to you? If so, then it would pay and spend some time in college. should have studied business administration in college.

However, unlike those entering law of medicine who often leave formal training and a limited internship to enter fully upon the practice of their professions at once, the prospective business executive is likely to begin in one of the lower brackets in production sales, finance, or accounting, and he does not become a full-fledged business executive except by does not become a full-fledged business executive except by does not become a full-fledged business executive except by gaining experience over a much longer period of time on the job and working up to the position.

REASONS GIVEN

Two reasons make the business executive's climb to the top harder: (1) business administration is probably far more complex than the practice of a profession; (2) a professional man may hang out his shingle and if he lacks ability and cannot obtain clients there is no great loss of capital, while if the prospective young business executive could begin as a full-fledged administrator and should lack ability and fail there usually would be great loss of capital—probably the capital of others.

The pamphlets go into the history of business administration and the first eight of the program of time on the just of the male graduates at the profession owners, managers or executives. This informative pamphlet tells the complete history of business administration and explains the duties of a typical administrator. It carries the student through the qualifications, the chances for advancement, and completely outlines the types of executive a student may become by proper study

Useful information as to the good schools that offer courses in business administration and an example of the courses offered by just one school is in the pamphlet.

Not only the attractive features of the job are pointed out but also the unattractive features are studied and explained thoroughly to the reader. When a person takes a job he usually wants to know how much he's going to be paid. A section of the pamphlet tells what may be expected in the amount a business executive receives and also tells some valuable facts about securing a position.

The book points out that not only men may be business executives, but the chances for women as executives are early good. However, it points out, that while opportunities are increased decidedly since the turn of the century, they are still limited in comparison with those of the men.
